MISS MACE OF LEBANON
WEDS MR. ALBERT P. SMITH

Lebanon, Tenn., July 20.—A marriage of more than ordinary interest to the people of this city was that of Miss Elvira Mace of this city and Albert P. Smith of Cookeville which occurred at the home of the bride at 4:30 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon. Dr. J. S. Ward of Nashville performed the ceremony in the presence of over 100 friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The house was very prettily decorated with ferns and plants, the color scheme being green and white. The improvised altar was banked with ferns and roses. The ring ceremony was used.

The bride, who was becomingly attired in a brown traveling suit, was given in marriage by her brother, Robin Mace, while Miss Smith, a sister of the groom served as maid of honor and McGregor Smith, a brother of the groom, served as best man. Preceding the ceremony vocal selections were given by Mrs. Julian Campbell with Misses Lila Cook and Margaret Seals accompanying her on the piano and the violin.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Mace of this city who has won a host of friends by her beauty and charming disposition. The groom is well known here, where he attended law school at Cumberland University, having graduated in June 1920. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Rutledge Smith of Cookeville and is at present a practicing attorney in Marianna, Ark.

They left immediately after the ceremony for a visit to Mr. and Mrs. George Armstrong at Lake Toxaway, N. C., and after spending a couple of weeks there will proceed to Marianna, Ark., where they will be at home to their friends after Aug. 1.—Nashville Banner.

The Filipinos are anxiously awaiting the day when the United States will grant them their independence, which leads a few to believe that some people are never so contented as when stirring up discontent. Independence for the Filipinos will mean renewed strife, disintegration, and final annexation by some foreign power.

IN MOVIE LAND

By Clara Cox Epperson

A LIMERICK.

"There was a young person named Clare
Who adopted a Frenchified air,
She drank cafe noir,
And when told "Au revoir!"
Would always reply, "Pomme de terre!"

—Robert T. Hardy.

The above limerick and the ones that follow are given for the benefit of students who may wish to enter the limerick contest mentioned in last week's article.

You will notice that the limerick is made up of five lines, sometimes four but more often five, the first two lines being long, the next two short, and the last long. It is a whimsical style of verse of one stanza developed by Edward Lear, who himself wrote over two hundred. The following are some very good examples by well known writers.

"A dentist whose surname was Moss
Fell in love with the charming Miss Ross,
But he held in abhorrence
Her Christian name Florence,
So he called her his Dental Floss."

—Carolyn Wells.

"There was a small boy of Quebec,
Who was buried in snow to his neck,
When they said, "Are you friz?"
He replied, "Yes I is—
But we don't call this cold in Quebec."

—Rudyard Kipling.

A well known limerick by an anonymous writer is:

"There was a young lady of Niger
Who smiled as she rode on a Tiger,
They came back from the ride
With the lady inside
And the smile on the face of the Tiger."

In the limerick contest the full name of the movie star must appear in each limerick submitted.

Jackie Coogan the wonderful little screen star who played with Charlie Chaplin in The Kid, has asked for stories from well known books that you think would suit his style. He is only six years of age and wants something natural and appealing to children. Our little folk should get busy hunting a story for Jackie. Any suggestion sent to him, care of Robt. Brunton Studios, Hollywood, California, if accepted the sender will be rewarded with a gift.

Mary Pickford is busily working on the picture she is producing based on the well-known book by Frances Hodgson Burnett, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and for the first time Mary will play a dual role, that of Little Lord Fauntleroy and his mother Dearest. This picture will be released in the fall by the American Artist Corporation.

Mary Pickford as Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks is enjoying to the fullest their beautiful home, Beverly Hills, which in situation, beauty and comfort is a dream of her childhood realized. She began as an actress at eleven and was bread winner for many years to help her mother, brother and sister, and she must now feel that a good fairy has waved her hand and given her the long dreamed of home.

An interesting picture, "Go And Get It," shown in Cookeville recently has been recalled to Nashville by popular request. It is full of action and the enterprising young newspaper writer, whose part is played by Marshall Neilan, is not deterred by air nor water in getting the desired scoop for his paper, travelink by aeroplane, seaplane, train and automobile to "go and get it."

LITTLE SKETCHES FROM TENNESSEE WRITERS

(Arranged by Clara Cox Epperson)

THE HISTORICAL SPRING.

By Annie P. Moses, Knoxville
(To Alvin C. York.)

"Nestled in the heart of the Cumberland Mountains, overshadowed by low hanging branches of the trees, flows in its primitive beauty a spring in whose crystal depths we find the source of inspiration to the future heroes of America.

"Looking down into its clear waters we see mirrored there the face of a red headed boy who, with his little bucket, starts out to be brave as he willingly carries the water from the spring up the steep, climbing hill to his mother—the mother who had guided his little footsteps through all the vicissitudes of life and led him daily on to glory and manhood.

"I shall touch lightly upon the honors he received or the story of his brilliant achievements, for you know how much he accomplished to be called one of the greatest heroes of the world war.

"When the call to arms came and the command for recruits was sent broadcast, against his religious principles he answered the call of his country, there to prove to the world the honor and bravery of a man whose past life was as simple as a child's, but one who loved the land of his birth and his people and placed them beyond all else.

"Then after the war, when all was over, to my mind, came the test of his manhood.

"Flattered by thousands, showered with gold and glory enough to turn the head of the bravest of men, he returned to the land of his birth, back to the mountains where the trees look ever up to God, and consecrated himself and life anew to his country, his home and his own people, in the effort to be truly helpful in the environment God had placed him.

"With a faithfulness that was most admirable, after his return from his wonderful triumph, he claimed his bride, the little sweet-heart he had left behind.

"On an altar made only by the hand of God, where close at the foot of this great rock flows the historical spring, where his little feet had probably grown tired with the weight of his bucket in the years gone by, the ceremony that united the two lives, was performed by the highest official of the State of Tennessee, and witnessed by many relatives, friends and hero worshippers.

"In establishing his home here we are led to believe and predict a future in which deeds of a greater glory perhaps will be mirrored in the waters of that beautiful historical Spring."

The above sketch was read by Mrs. Moses at the meeting of the Tennessee Woman's Press and Authors' Club at Mayland at the dinner arranged with toast program for Sergeant York. The simplicity with which Sergeant York has returned to his home, his loved ones and his work, proves him truly great, and his after life will be one that will sustain with dignity the laurels heaped upon him at the close of the World War.

The test of greatness truly is how one bears the honors thrust upon him by the admiring world. And alas so soon can the acclaims of admiration turn to jeers, that one is wise to retire from the world with the laurel wreath still upon his brow, lest perchance it may be removed.

It may also be truly said of the hero's test:

It is not the hour of his wondrous fame
The hero elicits our fears,
But what he will do to uphold or stain
His pure record in after years.
The simple life of work and of love
Led by the returned soldier brave,
Or the life thrown away in reveling
Will prove him a hero or knave.

THE CONFEDERATE NOTE

By S. A. Jones

The following poem which was written during the closing days of the Civil War, is being reproduced by request:

Representing nothing on God's earth now,
And naught in the waters below it;
As the pledge of a nation that's dead and gone,

Keep it, dear friend, and show it.
Show it to those who will lend an ear
To the tale that this paper can tell
Of liberty born of the patriot's dream,
Of a storm-cradled nation that fell.

Too poor to possess the precious ores,
And too much of a stranger to borrow,

We issued today our promise to pay,
Hoping to redeem on the morrow.
But days flew by, weeks became years
Our coffers were empty still;
Coin was so scarce our treasury'd quake,

If a dollar should drop in the till.
We know it had scarcely a value in gold,
Yet as gold the soldier received it;
It looked in our eyes a promise to pay,
And each patriot soldier believed it.

But the faith that was in us was strong indeed,
And our poverty well we discerned;
And three little checks represented the pay
That our suffering volunteers earned.

But our boys through little of prize or pay,
Or of bills that were overdue;
We knew if it brought us our bread today
'Twas the best our poor country could do.

Keep it; it tells our history o'er
From the birth of its dream to the last;
Modeled and born of the Angel Hope,
Like the hope of success it passed.
